Bid for 310 more taxis gets rejected

Plates. There are currently 1,526 cabs licensed to operate in the cityCalgary's taxi authority has rejected a bid to add 310 more cabs to city streets, a move some in the industry call a missed opportunity to alleviate peak-hour problems but others applaud, saying dispatch remains the main bottleneck.Associated Cabs general manager Jeff Garland said he was disappointed to see the Taxi Limousine Advisory Committee (TLAC) vote down the recommendation Friday, which he figured would have resulted in "better service for customers.""The biggest problem is there's a supply and demand issue," Garland said. "Whenthe demand outweighs the supply, you're going to have wait times."But Rupinder Gill, a former TLAC member who now runs his own company called Calgary United Cabs, said the committee "made the right decision."Gill said large taxi brokers would have benefited most from the proposal, as they would simply collect more rent revenue from 310 additional drivers, who would struggle to compete for fares in non-peak hours, when the city has more taxis than it needs."There's a lot of cars," Gill said. "It's a dispatch issue — they're not answering the phone."In his recommendation to TLAC, livery transport manager Marc Halat acknowledged releasing more plates would dilute fare revenue for drivers and amount to about $4.5 mil-lion more in annual rent revenue for brokers.Still, Halat recommended releasing more plates to boost Calgary's current taxi-to-population ratio to the 1998 level of 1-to-625. It currently stands at 1-to-748.Stephen King, a local tech entrepreneur and frustrated taxi customer, said releasing more plates seems like a partial solution but the city's regulations need to be entirely rebuilt to accommodate modern services like Uber, which connects customers and drivers through a smartphone app but currently runs afoul of Calgary's limousine laws."You look at a thing like Uber ... that would basically guarantee there would be drivers in the city for peak times," King said. "It's in place and working in many, many cities — and it's working well."ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

'CRUSHED SEVERELY'

Another cascade of bricks came tumbling down from this downtown Calgary highrise Sunday evening, crushing an Audi below. Engineers were assessing the structure at 608-7 St. SW Sunday night, which initially began shedding bricks Tuesday last week. A fire department official said it's likely the entire wall may need to be stripped. For the story, see page 3. And for the latest on the building's condition, visit metronews.ca. No injuries reported

Car severely crushed as bricks continue to fall from building

More bricks fell from a crumbling downtown Calgary highrise Sunday evening, crushing at least one car below, leading police to close off an adjacent street.

A gaping hole about six metres by four metres in size and three to four storeys up was apparent in the east side of the building at 608-7 St. SW, which initially began shedding bricks Tuesday last week.

An Audi that had been parked below the building since then sat beneath a pile of fallen debris.

Battalion Chief Ernie Molineaux said the car was "crushed severely."

No one was hurt. The fire department received the initial report of additional falling bricks at about 7 p.m. Sunday.

Engineers were en route at 9 p.m. to re-evaluate the building. Molineaux believed it's likely major work will need to be done on the wall.

"I think they're going to have to strip the back of the building off," he said.

A protective barrier made of shipping containers and concrete blocks had already been set up to protect pedestrians on the south side of 6 Avenue SW.

The immediate area remained cordoned off and a section of 7 Street was closed to traffic. Molineaux said it's likely the closures will affect Monday morning's commute.

Shelters to council: Don't limit pet ownership

Proposed bylaw change. Councillor wants to cap number of pets per owner

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Limiting the number of pets Calgarians can keep in their homes isn't the best way to deal with neglectful owners, says a group of local shelter and rescue operators and other citizens concerned with council's consideration of a bylaw change.

"I think what we need to

Not so fast

"In 10 years of rescue, I have seen countless people who have had one pet and couldn't provide adequate care.... I've also seen countless people who have had six or 10 animals or more and those animals live like kings and queens."

Christine Campbell of Oops-a-Dazy Rescue and Sanctuary Society

be looking at is standards of adequate care as opposed to a potential limit on the number of pets," Christine Campbell of Oops-a-Dazy Rescue and Sanctuary Society said Sunday.

Campbell recently wrote a letter, signed by more than 100 Calgarians, to Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart, who plans to put forward a motion at Monday's city council meeting to explore adding an animal limit to the city's Responsible Pet Ownership Bylaw.

The letter urges Colley-Urquhart and other councillors to consider potential unintended consequences of such a change, which Campbell said could put extra strain on area shelters by forcing people with multiple animals to give up their pets or discouraging responsible owners from adopting additional pets.

Instead, Campbell hopes Calgary will look at addressing mental-health issues related to animal hoarding and push for the strengthening of other laws surrounding animal abuse.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi said Sunday he's heard "very good arguments on both sides" of the issue.

"We'll get this one right and we'll think it through," the mayor said. "I hate making policy in response to one bad incident but at the same time this may show a little bit of a hole in the work that we do."

Following last year's devastating flooding, the annual Lilac Festival signals a return to normalcy and prosperity in Mission.

4 Going green

Jocelyn Taylor, left, and Jen Allester spread the word about new trash and recycling initiatives.

Just as they've done for the past 24 years, Calgarians came out in droves to take part in the 25th annual Lilac Festival Sunday and celebrate the kickoff to the city's festival season.

After last year's flood and the long winter that followed, Jennifer Rempel, executive director of the 4th Street Business Revitalization Zone, said people have been eager to celebrate Mission.

"I think you can really feel that sense of community," she said. "You feel that from not only the people that live here, but Calgarians who are coming out to come back and enjoy this street again."

Jenn Vanderlaan, a volunteer with the Cliff Bungalow/Mission Community Association, said the festival is not only important for the residents in the area but the businesses as well, some of which only recently opened following the flood.

"That's great to see, too, because it was a long haul for a lot of them and I'm sure it wasn't easy," said Vanderlaan.

Tidying up

- The Lilac Festival introduced new waste and recycling stations. Organizers planned to sort and weigh every piece of trash.
- An additional 18 employees and 100 volunteers were brought on just for the waste and recycling initiative.

Mayor Naheed Nenshi said Sunday that the Lilac Festival marks one of his favourite days of the year.

"It's a real kickoff to our summer season," he said. "It's great for Calgarians to get back to 4th Street to support those local businesses and to support the Mission community."

PC leadership. Candidates eye changes to families on government planes

The policy that allows family members of Alberta Tory politicians to fly on government planes may soon be history.

Two of the three candidates running to be leader of the PC party say they will axe that policy should they win the vote in September and become premier. Both Jim Prentice and Ric McIver say the planes are only for government business, and for those conducting government business.

Candidate Thomas Lukaszuk says there's social value in having family members fly, but said if he allows it as premier it

Last year's flood debris retrieved in river cleanup

The 47th Annual Pathway and River Cleanup. Bits of buildings, bicycles, remnants of campsites also fished from rivers

robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

Roughly 2,900 Calgarians combed about 200 kilometres of riverbanks and pathways Sunday as part of a citywide effort to clean up litter and debris.

The 47th Annual Pathway and River Cleanup will likely yield especially unusual items, Fire Chief Bruce Burrell said Sunday morning, due to the remnants of last year's flood.

"It wouldn't surprise me if people found small parts of buildings in there that have been washed down from upstream," Burrell said as the cleanup effort began.

Sure enough, volunteers returning later in the day reported finding just that.

"We found lots of wood — a lot of wood with nails in it that looked like flood debris," said Andrea Stevens, one of about 70 volunteers from Stantec.

Stevens' group was responsible for the banks along the Bow River between the 10 Street Bridge and the Peace Bridge.

In addition to the flood

'Part of our blood'

This year's event saw an increase of 300 volunteers over last year's complement, and Mayor Naheed Nenshi said the cleanup had particular significance.

- "It's particularly poignant because it's a way of us saying to the river, 'You know, you did us a lot of damage last year, but the rivers are still a part of our blood, they still run through our veins in this city, and we love them and we're going to take care of them.'" debris and assorted litter, she said they also found three bicycles and the remnants of numerous campsites.

"For the larger objects, we put in a flag and call 311 and they come along the path and clean it up," Stevens said.

Low voter turnout in the east

Rebels close polling stations

The question of who was able to vote Sunday loomed large over the democratic process. Some 35.5 million Ukrainians were eligible to vote, but separatists in the eastern Donetsk and Luhansk regions — which have 5.1 million voters — said they would not hold the vote because they are no longer part of Ukraine.

The regional administration in Donetsk said only 426 of 2,430 polling stations in the region were open Sunday, and none in the city of Donetsk. There was no voting in the city of Luhansk either, but some stations were open in the wider Luhansk region. Fighting broke out Sunday in the Luhansk town of Novooaidar, where the Interfax-Ukraine news agency quoted the deputy interior minister as saying one person was killed and another injured in the fighting. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Presidential election.

Billionaire chocolate magnate pledges to 'bring peace to the Ukrainian land'

An exit poll showed that billionaire candy-maker Petro Poroshenko won Ukraine's presidential election Sunday in the first round — a vote that authorities hoped would unify the deeply fractured nation.

The ballot took place amid weeks of fighting in the sprawling eastern regions that form Ukraine's industrial heartland, where pro-Russia separatists have seized government buildings and battled government troops. The rebels had vowed to block the ballot in the east — and less than 20 per cent of the polling stations were open there.

Long lines of voters snaked around polling stations in Kyiv, the pro-Western capital, but heavily armed pro-Russia rebels in eastern Ukraine intimidated locals by smashing ballot boxes, shutting down polling centres and issuing threats.

The exit poll for Sunday's election, conducted by three respected Ukrainian survey agencies, found the 48-year-old candy tycoon Poroshenko getting 55.9 per cent of the vote.

At a distant second was former prime minister Yulia Tymoshenko with 12.9 per cent, the poll showed. Full results are expected Monday in the election that could be a critical step toward resolving Ukraine's protracted crisis.

"The country has got a new president," a confident and composed Poroshenko told several hundred journalists at his election headquarters. "I would like to thank everyone for the support that the Ukraine has showed today for me and my team." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Soldiers drive away a van carrying an unidentified Thai woman as anti-coup protesters, right, attempted to harm her during a demonstration in Bangkok, Thailand, Sunday. WASON WANICHAKORN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thai military threatens action

Warning. Anti-coup protesters could face crackdown

Thailand's ruling military council stiffened its warnings Sunday against protests over its takeover of power, with its patience apparently wearing thin over demonstrations that have been growing in size and boldness.

The warning came a day before the coup leader, Army Commander Gen. Prayuth Chan-ocha, was expected to receive the king's endorsement formalizing his status as head of government.

After that, it's anticipated Prayuth may announce plans for reshaping Thailand's political scene with an interim constitution to replace the one scrapped by the army after Thursday's coup, and an appointed legislative body.

After three days of tense but mostly nonviolent confrontations between protesters and security forces, a spokesman for the ruling National Council for Peace and Order warned that officials may need to strictly enforce an army-imposed law that prohibits people from demonstrating against the coup.

Hinting that the army was ready to cast off restraint, Col. Winthai Suvarere said that in case of clashes in which losses or injuries incur, no compensation can be claimed because the country is under martial law.

"I want fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters to warn their families that there is no benefit in coming out to oppose (the coup)," Winthai said.

On Sunday, protesters against the coup appeared to number as many as 2,000, growing from a few hundred on Friday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Exit polls

EU Parliament shifts to the right

Exit polls show the far right and Euroskeptics have made sweeping gains in European Parliament elections, signalling a major political shift toward parties that want to slash the European Union's powers or abolish it altogether.

Polls in recent days had predicted Euroskeptics could snag as many as a third of the seats in the EU's 751-seat legislature in the vote ending Sunday.

Interim president promises fair vote

Egypt's interim president urged Egyptians on Sunday to come out and vote in this week's presidential election, saying the vote will shape the nation's future.

In a televised address, Adly Mansour also sought to assure Egyptians that state institutions would not interfere in the Monday and Tuesday voting.

"Let us all come out tomorrow and the day after to express our free choice. Choosing, without being guided or dictated to, the person we trust to have the ability to build and run the nation," Mansour said.

Sweden

Feminist party enters EU Parliament

Exit polls by Sweden's public broadcaster SVT shows the country's Feminist Initiative Party entering the European Parliament for the first time.

Poll results from SVT Sunday suggested seven per cent of Swedes back the feminist party, which wants to boost the rights of women and minorities in the European Union. The party has presented itself as counterweight to EU right-wing movements with the slogan "Replace the racists with feminists!"

Do you know why a mortgage document is so big?

It's because there's a lot more in it than just the rate.

Why lowest isn't always best.

Don't get us wrong. A low rate is great. But most low rate mortgages come with restrictive terms that could keep you in your mortgage longer than you'd like. Which means paying interest longer than you'd like. So, instead of thinking about the cost of your mortgage in rate terms, think about it in dollar terms. For example, how much interest will you pay over the life of your mortgage?

How restrictive terms cost you in the end.

The key to saving interest costs is having the flexibility to increase payments or make extra payments. With rates as low as they are, regular lump sum and increased payments will save you more interest over the life of your mortgage. Even more than switching to bi-weekly payments![†]

Good advice is worth its weight in gold.

Locking in at today's low rates might be right for you. But keep in mind that small changes can make a big difference in helping you become mortgage-free faster so keeping that flexibility is essential.

So how can we offer a rate this low with the benefits you want?

Since we refuse to overload our mortgages with restrictions and we insist on giving people competitively low rates, the only way we can do it is for a limited time.

SPECIAL OFFER MORTGAGE RATE

* All mortgages are subject to applicable credit approval, Scotiabank residential mortgage standards and maximum permitted loan amounts. Scotiabank 5-Year Fixed Rate Special – The new mortgage must be set up as a 5-year closed term fixed rate mortgage at a rate of 2.97%. As of May 22nd, 2014, if there are no 'cost of borrowing' charges (for example, appraisal fees), the APR for the rate of 2.97% equals 2.95% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance). Where a typical appraisal fee of $300 is assumed (actual appraisal fees may vary), the APR equals 3.02% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance), for a term of 5 years – assuming a mortgage of $100,000 with a 25-year amortization. Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage Special – Scotiabank Prime as of September 9, 2010 was 3.00%. As of May 22nd, 2014, the Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage – Closed 5 Year Term was 2.47%. If there are no 'cost of borrowing' charges (for example, appraisal fees), the APR for the rate of 2.47% equals 2.46% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance). Where a typical appraisal fee of $300 is assumed (actual appraisal fees may vary), the APR equals 2.52% (compounded semi-annually, not in advance), for a term of 5 years – assuming a mortgage of $100,000 with a 25-year amortization. The Scotia Flex Value® Mortgage interest rate varies with Scotiabank Prime. These offers expire June 7th, 2014 but are subject to change or withdrawal at any time. The mortgage must be funded within 90 days of the application date. Other conditions may apply.

† Assuming a mortgage of $270,000 with a 25-year amortization at a rate of 2.97%, switching to bi-weekly payments will decrease your amortization to less than 23 years and save you approximately $14,130 in interest. Alternatively, assuming the same mortgage of $270,000 with a 25-year amortization at a rate of 2.97%, if you keep your monthly payment frequency but apply annual lump sum prepayments of $500 and increase your regular payments by just $20 every year, after your first year, you will decrease your amortization to less than 21 years and save approximately $18,923 in interest.

Pontiff expresses solidarity with Palestinians

Holy Land pilgrimage. 'I am with you,' Pope Francis told children at Dheisheh refugee camp in Bethlehem

Pope Francis delivered a powerful boost of support to the Palestinians during a Holy Land pilgrimage Sunday, repeatedly backing their statehood aspirations, praying solemnly at Israel's controversial separation barrier and calling the stalemate in peace efforts "unacceptable."

In an unscripted move, Francis arranged a meeting between the Israeli and Palestinian presidents at the Vatican next month. The meeting, while largely symbolic, shows how the Pope has sought to transform his immensely popular appeal into a moral force for peace.

On the second day, the Pope arrived in Bethlehem, the birthplace of Christianity, before heading to Israel for the final leg of his visit.

While Francis mingled warmly with his Israeli hosts, his trip to Bethlehem included the day's most powerful images as he expressed sympathy and solidarity with Palestinians.

"I am with you," he told a group of Palestinian children at a stop in Bethlehem's Dheisheh refugee camp.

Even the Pope's arrival in Bethlehem — by helicopter straight from Jordan — carried important symbolic significance. Past papal visits to the West Bank have come through Israel. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poland

The general in tinted glasses dies

Poland's last communist leader, the general in tinted glasses, died Sunday at age 90 after a long struggle with cancer.

Born into a patriotic and Catholic Polish milieu, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and his family were deported to Siberia by the Red Army during the Second World War. Despite his suffering at Soviet hands, Jaruzelski faithfully imposed Moscow's will on his subjugated nation until communism crumbled across the region in 1989. Poland is deeply divided over whether to view Jaruzelski as a traitor or as a patriot who made an agonizing decision to spare the country the bloodshed of a Soviet invasion.

Jaruzelski stirred up these emotions for his defining act: his 1981 imposition of martial law, a harsh crack-down aimed at crushing the pro-democracy Solidarity movement founded earlier by Lech Walesa.

"Those times were complicated; I'm leaving the assessment to God," Walesa said.

The suppression of Solidarity led to the imprisonment of thousands of dissidents, the deaths of dozens and economic stagnation that contributed to the system's undoing. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Xinjiang bombing bares China's ethnic divisions

Growing gap. Terror activity highlights split between minorities and ethnic Chinese in northwest capital

Yang Bin and Chen Li stand out in their neighbourhood in the capital of China's Muslim northwest. The couple from the country's Han ethnic majority live surrounded by minority Uighurs, but have little to do with their neighbours.

"We don't speak their language, so we don't interact with them at all," Yang, a labourer, said of the Turkish-speaking Muslims. His wife added: "They are basically foreigners, and they behave like foreigners."

State media say ethnic Chinese and minorities mix easily in Urumqi, capital of the Xinjiang region. But interviews with more than two dozen residents following Thursday's bombing at a vegetable market in the city that killed at least 43 people suggest a harsher reality in which the two groups regard each other across a tense gulf of misunderstanding and suspicion.

Relations have deteriorated since rioting in 2009 left nearly 200 people dead. Both groups are moving out of ethnically mixed neighbourhoods, making an already divided city of three million even more segregated. The tensions raise questions about how Beijing can defuse mounting unrest that Uighur activists say is due to frustration over an influx of Han Chinese and discriminatory policies such as a ban on taking children to mosques.

"There is greater discontent now and recognition that the Uighur character of the region is being irretrievably lost," Ahmed A.S. Hashim, a terrorism expert at Singapore's Nanyang Technical University, said in an email. "Chinese promises to develop (the economy) and provide jobs don't seem to have panned out."

In Thursday's attack, men in two off-road vehicles rammed through crowds at the popular street market in central Urumqi and set off explosives.

'Kill Jews.' Town votes to choose a new name

Voters in the tiny Spanish village of Castrillo Matagudios, whose name means "Camp Kill Jews," overwhelmingly decided Sunday that it's time to change the name their town has had for nearly four centuries.

Mayor Lorenzo Rodriguez said the vote was 29-19 for the village with just 56 registered voters about 260 kilometres north of Madrid.

Documents show the town's original name was Castrillo Matagudios, meaning "Jews' Hill Camp." The "Kill Jews" part of the name dates from 1627, more than a century after a 1492 Spanish royal edict ordering Jews to become Catholics or flee the country.

Researchers believe the town got its current name from Jewish residents who converted to Catholicism and wanted to reinforce their repudiation of Judaism to convince Spanish authorities of their loyalty, Rodriguez said.

Jewish Museum attack. Belgium launches manhunt for suspect

Belgium launched a nationwide hunt Sunday for a lone gunman who walked into the Jewish Museum, unpacked a Kalashnikov rifle, killed four people with a short burst of fire, packed up and briskly walked away.

Saturday's attack led Belgian officials to raise anti-terror measures and increase the protection for Jewish sites for what was widely seen as an anti-Semitic attack. It happened on the eve of Belgium's nationwide election and as voters across the continent picked a new European Parliament.

Video of the attack showed an athletic man with a cap walking with determination into the small Jewish Museum in the swank Sablon area. He quickly carried out what was apparently a preplanned attack. The assault took a minute at most.

The fourth victim died Sunday afternoon, according to a government official who asked not to be identified because the news had not yet been officially announced.

No one has claimed responsibility for the killings. Leaders from Belgium and France, Pope Francis, Israeli leader Benjamin Netanyahu and others condemned the cold-blooded attack.

"We call on the whole population to help identify this person," deputy prosecutor Ine Van Wymersch said Sunday before three separate videos and still photos of the attack were posted on the federal police website. None have a clear view of the man's face.

She said the gunman who killed an Israeli tourist couple, a French woman and a Belgian man "probably acted alone, was armed and well prepared."

Rampage previewed in resentful videos

California college killings. Shooter left six dead and 13 wounded

In YouTube videos and a long written manifesto, Elliot Rodger aired his contempt for everyone from his roommates to the whole human race, reserving special hate for two groups: the women he says kept him a virgin for all of his 22 years, and the men they chose instead.

Authorities said he put that bitterness into action in a stabbing and shooting rampage Friday night across the seaside California college town of Isla Vista that killed two young women and four men, at least half of them students at the University of California, Santa Barbara. Thirteen people were injured.

Rodger then apparently shot and killed himself inside the black BMW he used in the violence, authorities said Saturday.

The rampage played out largely as he laid it out in the public postings, including a YouTube video where he sits in the BMW in sunset light and appears to be acting out scripted lines and planned laughs.

"I'll take great pleasure in slaughtering all of you,"

A man holding flowers near a makeshift memorial is seen behind flower-filled bullet holes in the windows of the IV Deli on Sunday in Isla Vista, Calif. DAVID MCNEW/GETTY IMAGES

Rodger, the son of a Hollywood director who worked on The Hunger Games, says in the video posted Friday and taken down by YouTube Saturday with a message saying it violated the site's terms of service.

"I don't know why you girls are so repulsed by me," he says in the video, describing his loneliness and frustration at never having had sex with or even kissed a girl. "I am polite. I am the ultimate gentleman. And yet, you girls never give me a chance. I don't know why."

Of the men he sees as rivals, he said: "I deserve girls much more than all those slob," and that after his rampage "you will finally see that I am, in truth, the superior one, the true alpha male."

Thirteen people were injured in the rampage, eight from gunshot wounds, four from the vehicle and one whose origin wasn't clear. Four of the injuries were considered serious.

Europeans and Americans are facing off over a ruling on what pops up when your name is searched. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Is it a right to be forgotten?

Privacy. An American is pinning the recent court ruling on search-engine results on 'prissy European sensibilities'

Europe's moves to rein in Google — including a court ruling this month ordering the search giant to give people a say in what pops up when someone searches their name — may be seen in Brussels as striking a blow for the little guy.

But across the Atlantic, the idea that users should be able to edit Google search results in the name of privacy is being slammed as weird and difficult to enforce at best and a crack-down on free speech at worst.

"Americans will find their searches bowdlerized by prissy European sensibilities," said Stewart Baker, former assistant secretary for policy at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. "We'll be the big losers. The big winners will be French ministers who want the right to have their last mistress forgotten."

Mountain View, Calif.-based Google says it's still figuring out how to comply with the European Court of Justice's May 13 ruling, which says the company must respond to complaints about private information that turns up in searches.

Google must then decide whether the public's right to be able to find the information outweighs an individual's right to control it — with preference given to the individual.

Flavours. Kid-centric brands fume over e-cigs

Owners of brands geared toward children of all ages are battling to keep notable names like Thin Mint, Tootsie Roll and Cinnamon Toast Crunch off the flavoured nicotine used in electronic cigarettes.

General Mills Inc., the Girl Scouts of the USA and Tootsie Roll Industries Inc. are among several companies that have sent cease-and-desist letters to makers of the liquid nicotine demanding they stop using the brands and may take further legal action if necessary.

They want to make sure their brands aren't being used to sell an addictive drug or make it appealing to children.

The actions highlight the debate about the array of flavours available for the battery-powered devices that heat a liquid nicotine solution, creating vapour that users inhale.

The Food and Drug Administration last month proposed regulating electronic cigarettes but didn't immediately ban fruit or candy flavours, which are barred for use in regular cigarettes because of the worry that the flavours are used to appeal to children.

There are about 1,500 e-liquid makers in the U.S. and countless others abroad selling vials of nicotine from traditional tobacco to cherry cola on the Internet and in retail stores, often featuring photos of the popular treats. Using the brand name like Thin Mint or Fireball conjures up a very specific flavour in buyers' minds, in a way that just "mint chocolate" or "cinnamon" doesn't.

"Using the Thin Mint name — which is synonymous with Girl Scouts and everything we do to enrich the lives of girls — to market e-cigarettes to youth is deceitful and shameless," Girl Scouts spokeswoman Kelly Parisi said in a statement.

'Reducing bureaucracy'

Rogers cutting corner-office fat

There will be some reductions in the management ranks at Rogers Communications Inc. and a new focus on agility but no large-scale reductions are planned, the company's new chief executive says.

Rogers president and CEO Guy Laurence spent Friday telling the company's workforce and reporters that Rogers will untangle organizational structure that he likened to a bowl of "cold spaghetti" so it can be better at meeting the needs of customers.

"When you remove overlap and reduce bureaucracy, and you create agility, then it takes less people in management. So there will be job losses at the management level. No doubt of this," Laurence said.

"But because this is not a cost story, I don't have a dollar value or a number of people. I don't even have the vaguest idea in my head what that might be."

Shopping

Feel like you're being followed?

You're not being paranoid. You are being tracked at the mall, via your smartphone.

Analytics — finding patterns in recorded data — has long been a major part of e-commerce. Now, brick-and-mortar stores are tracking you, too.

The Silicon Valley, Calif., startup RetailNext uses algorithms to interpret data taken from surveillance video cameras and smartphone trackers installed inside some of North America's biggest retailers. The video cameras and Wi-Fi trackers can tell store owners details, like how long a customer spends looking at a specific pair of jeans. Wi-Fi trackers, which can be set up on store shelves, gather data by automatically activating and reading anonymous identifiers in customer's smartphones.

RetailNext said its mobile analytics technology is used at 400 locations in Canada, including at clothing retailer American Apparel, as well as Bloomingdale's and Verizon Wireless in the U.S.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Branding. Sex helps sell new businesses

They taste a lot better than they sound.

If you have been in Ottawa recently and tried one of Angela Firman and Kathy Aldridge's Hot Cream Holes or stuffed your face with Maria and Claudio Santamaria's Bunz and Ballz, you know what I mean.

Yes, the names are sexual and that's no accident when you talk to the two ladies serving up hot donuts stuffed with ice cream. They know just how well sex sells.

"We had some guys giggling and laughing and I noticed they were like, 'Oh, Hot Cream Holes,'" said Aldridge. "And I said, 'Come on, guys, you know you want to try a Hot Cream Hole,' and they were like, 'Yeah, we are definitely coming back.'"

And the taste of a warm donut stuffed with ice cream with caramel and salt drizzled on top is what you'd expect: orgasmic. They have other flavours too: Ivana S'More and Plane Jane.

Now if you're not ready for dessert yet, take a bite of Santamaria's Bunz and Balls — Italian arancini and ravazzata stuffed with ground beef, green peas and a homemade ragu sauce.

Maria told Metro that while the name is a bit racy, customers didn't really take note until they added the cannoli to complement the Bunz and Ballz — a long, skinny dessert shaped like, well, you get it.

One might think risqué restaurant names to be a deterrent for foodies, but marketing expert Ian Capstick of MediaStyle had one word when told about the two new Ottawa businesses: "Awesome."

He said that a good brand goes beyond just a name, but encompasses the entire philosophy and personality of the people behind the business.

WHAT STEPS DO WE NEED TO TAKE?

The walk to school is on its way out — and now, more than ever, we need a movement to bring it back.

A big wake-up call came earlier this month, when Active Healthy Kids Canada put out a report card comparing physical activity levels between countries.

The results? Children in Colombia, Kenya and Mozambique have higher physical activity levels than Canadian kids do.

In cities like Calgary, we enjoy the many trimmings of wealth: shiny new recreation centres, youth hockey leagues and countless other sports programs.

You'd think that in an affluent society, we'd take advantage of some of the opportunities afforded us.

But despite this abundance, we still lag. Canada was given a D-grade for overall physical activity levels in children and youth. That puts us behind other countries such as Mexico (C+), Nigeria

URBAN COMPASS

Jeremy Klaszus
calgary@metronews.ca

(C) and Ghana (D).

Canada, according to the report, is "over-developed" when it comes to the lifestyles of kids.

"We have engineered opportunities for spontaneous movement (such as getting to places on foot and playing outdoors) out of our kids' daily lives, and have tried to compensate with organized activities such as dance recitals, soccer leagues and PE classes," says the report.

So what's the solution?

"The answer requires a hard look at our culture of convenience."

Activity levels dramatically drop once Canadian kids hit school age. At age three and four, 84 per cent of kids get the recommended exercise time. At age 5 to 11, that plunges to a mere seven per cent of children. And this brings us to the walk (or bike ride) to school. Physically active transportation is a key piece of the puzzle — a fundamental childhood experience that is being worked out of Canadian kids' lives by grownups.

Most Canadian kids are driven to school.

Part of the challenge is that adults tend to think that certain places are too far for their children to walk or bike to, when in fact they really aren't.

It is, however, generally more convenient to drive.

Here, the socially acceptable walking distance to school is less than 1.6 kilometres, according to the report.

Things are different in Finland. There, three out of every four kids who live between one and three kilometres from school use active transportation to get there. That's considered normal.

In Canada, it doesn't help that in cities such as Calgary, the education system emphasizes choice over community. In this consumer model, parents are encouraged to choose from a buffet of academic options rather than what's closest and most accessible by foot. As a result, kids end up crisscrossing into distant communities by vehicle.

Yes, they may be getting the best education that parents can hope for, but as we strive to give kids a competitive edge in everything from school to sports, we appear to be inflicting more harm than help.

Glacier recedes at unglacial pace

The Athabasca glacier, part of the Columbia Icefields in Jasper National Park, Alta., is seen in moonlight during a long exposure this May. JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Astonishing' rate of more than five metres a year

What's believed to be the most-visited glacier in North America is losing more than five metres of ice every year and is in danger of completely disappearing within a generation, says a Parks Canada manager.

The Athabasca Glacier is the largest of six ice sheets that form part of the Columbia Icefield in Jasper National Park.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Passage of time leaves its mark

While it receives about seven metres of snowfall annually, the glacier has been slowly shrinking for about 150 years.

"It's astonishing," said John Wilmschurst, Jasper National Park's resource conservation manager.

The passage of time is clearly visible at the ice sheet's base. Markers dating back as early as 1890 show the toe of the Athabasca Glacier has retreated 1.5 kilometres, leaving a moonscape of gravel and rock behind. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Climate change

A recent American state-of-the-union report has singled out the rapid melt of glaciers in British Columbia and Alaska as a major climate change issue, saying they are "shrinking substantially."

"I think long term it's not good news at all," said Wilmschurst. "Absolutely the glacier will be gone. Not within my lifetime, probably, but maybe within my children's lifetime."

SEE THE NEWS COME ALIVE...

In this issue, you can find AR enhancements on page 8 in News, page 21 in Scene and page 34 in Sports

To see pages from Metro spring to life, simply download or update the Metro News app available from your device's app store and follow these three easy steps:

1. Open the Metro News app on your smartphone or tablet device. Click the AR icon in the top right corner.
2. Hold your device over any image that has the AR logo near it. Make sure you wait for the green scanning bar to read the image!
3. Voilà! You should see the AR in action — like a video, slide show or mobile content experience. You can even move your phone away from the page and interact with the content directly on your device.

Worth mentioning. PetMatch app aims to be a man's best friend

A new phone app helps you find your perfect match ... if you're looking for a cat or dog, that is. The PetMatch app allows users to upload an image of a cute critter and then searches its database of animals that are almost identical, and up for adoption. The gizmo, launched by California startup Superfish, uses techy algorithms and patented image recognition technology to plot key characteristics (eyes, mouth and colour) to speed up the search process. Metro chats to co-founder Adi Pinhas about why pictures are worth a thousand words.

Did you start PetMatch because you needed to replace a dead pet?

(Laughs) No, it wasn't for that reason. We started with animals because it's a great news case study for a visual search. It demonstrates the technology in a way that shows that visual searches can be more fun and efficient than text searches. Rarely you know the name of a breed's name or how to search for it, so this app does the hard bit for you.

What else can you match up?

It can do lots of neat stuff. People are taking images of desserts in a restaurant and we can show them restaurants that are selling similar desserts. If you take a picture of a chair or piece of furniture, you can find a similar style through the app.

Are you just trying to make life easier for people?

Yes, we are looking and we're thinking how can we make the camera a lot smarter. If someone wants a handbag or want to know the name of a flower, they can take a pic and find out its name and where it is available.

People will have to think less ...

Well, it's easier for you to connect with the world around you. Instead of opening Google and using keywords, you can take a pic. Why try to do it in keywords when you have a picture?

A mind-blowing, definitive look at Mozart's music and genius, this ebook is astonishingly alive with sheet music, letters, paintings, timelines, and child prodigy performances. Seven leading scholars showcase his pianos and violins, his travels and influences, his family relationships and childish glee for "lavatory humour." There are hours of music, discussion, and short films, all so very humbling, surprising, and beautiful.

Young Canadian wows Cannes jury

Jury Prize. Xavier Dolan shares festival prize with legendary French filmmaker

Canadian director Xavier Dolan won the Jury Prize for his film Mommy at the Cannes Film Festival Saturday, sharing the honour with French filmmaker Jean-Luc Godard.

Dolan's film is a highly emotional drama starring Anne Dorval as the determined single mother of a violent and agitated 15-year-old son (Antoine-Olivier Pilon).

There were high hopes that Dolan would win the festival's top award, the prestigious Palme d'Or, but that honour went to the Turkish drama Winter Sleep.

Dolan was moved that he shared his prize with Godard, the 83-year-old film icon.

"What's beautiful in sharing a prize with Godard is that he, in a different era, tried to reinvent cinema and I like to think that we are in a moment where cinema is going in a different direction and I would be happy to be part of that."

Dolan, 25, was the youngest director at the festival, while Godard (Goodbye to Language), 83, was the oldest.

Dolan was very emotional when he went on stage, having to interrupt his speech a few times to regain his composure.

"The emotion that is sweeping over me as I think of this mythical room is overwhelming," he said.

"I am lost in gratitude thinking of the recognition of the jury, the love we have felt over the last week, which has made me realize that we do this job to love and be loved in return."

He also seized the opportunity to urge his peers, in

"There are no limits to our ambitions, other than those we impose upon ourselves and those that others impose upon us. Everything is possible for those who dream, who dare, who work and who never give up."

Telefilm Canada executive director Carolle Brabant, issued a statement congratulating Dolan for winning the award.

Dolan's list of films also include Heartbeats (Les Amours Imaginaires) (2010); Laurence Anyways (2012) and Tom at the Farm (Tom à la ferme) (2013).

The Montreal-born filmmaker began acting in commercials at age four, appeared in the TV movie Misericorde in 1994, and the divisive 2008 horror film Martyrs in 2008.

So a telepathic cop walks into a gastropub...

The Listener, season 5. 'Oz' opens a new bar and intuitive Toby has a lot on his plate

Every TV series evolves over five seasons. The Listener, however, has gone through more changes than a set of quintuplets.

The CTV drama, about a special forces cop who uses his intuitive powers to solve tricky crime cases, returns for a fifth season on Monday.

It wasn't always so easy to describe lead character Toby Logan (Craig Olejnik). Even in the new press kit, he's called a "telepathic former paramedic." This new season, we are told, is all about "a new boss, new baby and a new bar."

The new boss is really an old boss, Insp. Brian Becker (Anthony Lemke). He's returning to the Integrated Investigative Bureau (IIB) after a four-year absence. He's not exactly Toby's biggest fan, still blaming him for the death of his police partner and never sure what the deal is with his crime-fighting "spidey-sense" — even though Logan is now a full-fledged and trained police officer.

The new baby belongs to Sgt. Michelle McCluskey (Lauren Lee Smith), on maternity leave from the IIB as the season starts. She's also now married to Adam, played by Kris Holden-Ried (Lost Girl).

The bar belongs to Osman "Oz" Bey, played by Ennis Esmer. When the series started, he was Toby's best friend and good-natured paramedic partner. Now he's switching careers from hospital administration to bartender/owner of the popular gastropub Pasazade.

It's on the large and modern Pasazade set — housed in the new home of The Listener, Toronto's mammoth Pinewood Studios — where the cast and producers have gathered to promote season 5.

Esmer is literally working the bar. The 35-year-old points out that only one of the many bottles of liquor behind the bar contains real booze — and he knows which one. A native of Turkey, he also recommended the west-end Toronto caterer who had Turkish delight spread out on the bar for visiting reporters.

Canadian TV actors tend to have comedy mixed with drama in their resumés — it's their only way to make a living.

Esmer definitely plays both sides of the fence, training at Toronto's Second City and stand-up comedy clubs, hosting the short-lived local music/variety series The Toronto Show and eventually specializing in comic relief roles on dramas such as The L.A. Complex. He's received more attention for his role in last year's indie production Sex After Kids.

An ever-changing role and Watch it

- The fifth season of The Listener airs tonight on CTV at 9 p.m. EDT/PDT

a schedule on The Listener allowed Esmer to juggle his day job with these other projects, including one stint as comic co-host (with Jonathan Torrens) of Wipeout Canada. He hopes this left turn into the bar is a Listener move that will stick.

"I'm basically in Cheers," he says. "It's great." His character has always been a little detached from the show, he says. "It's like this soft science-fiction police procedural," he says, "and then I'm in, like, a little bar comedy."

The Shaftesbury producers put the new bar set to good use this season. Toronto's brutal winter forced the cast and crews back indoors as scenes were rewritten to escape the snow. As a result, season 5 finds several cast members sorting out their police and private life back at Oz's bar.

Kanye leaves wedding guests in altar-ed state

Quick: Try to think of the longest, most rambling wedding reception speech you've ever had to endure. Well, the one Kanye West gave this weekend might have been longer and rambler.

As the whole world knows, the rapper married reality star Kim Kardashian on Saturday at Fort Belvedere in Florence. And according to E! Online, he followed that up by giving a 20-minute speech to the assembled horde of celebrity guests, in which he called the Kardashian family an "industry" and "the most remarkable people of our time" who can "make the world a better place." West "went on and on about the culture of being in the lime-light and that all the spoofing and tabloid covers don't get him or the Kardashian family down. 'I am defined by being a celebrity ... the world is our altar,' he announced to a cheering room. 'We are not stupid!'"

The site also reported that West "got very heated during certain parts of his speech, but he also had very sweet things to say about his new bride. He called her the 'ideal celebrity' and the 'ideal art,' and he gushed about spending 'every day of my life with Kim.'"

Six signs you're a shopaholic

Spending like a drunken sailor?

GAIL VAZ-OXLADE
Gail blogs daily at gailvazoxlade.com

If I had a nickel for every email I got from people telling me that they think they might be a shopaholic, I could buy ... well, I'd save the money, actually. It seems that the Buying Bug has become a social disease. So how do you know if you've been bitten? Here are six clues:

1. You have all the toys. You may not be in the red, but your closet is jammed to the rafters with stuff. Chronic spending is often unconscious spending, so you may not even know you're doing it. Take a look around. Do you seem to have a version of every popular trend? Is your home stuffed to the rafters? Are there things you've bought that are still in the box or hanging in your closet with the tags on?

2. You're sure shopping will cure what ails you. Emotional shoppers turn to the high they derive from spending money to compensate from the low they're feeling in their lives. I hate to burst your bubble, but shopping isn't going to make up for a crappy childhood. Nor will it cure an unhappy career, a disintegrating relationship or anything else that ails you emotionally. If you're buying to feel better, you're spending for the wrong reasons.

3. Your favourite phrase is "Oh, why not?" All of us fall prey to impulse shopping from time to time. But when "Oh, why not?" comes out of your mouth more than once or twice a year, you've got an impulse control problem. The problem for people who can't curb their desire for immediate gratification is that they're not prioritizing. They've lost (or never had) the ability to figure out if they can do without, so they're living in debt or, worse, a centimetre away from destitution.

4. Spending makes you feel rich. You like showing off that you've got money to spend. As counterintuitive as it may seem, some people become chronic spenders out of a fear of poverty. It can be a self-esteem thing, too. If you have a trophy kitchen but you're not cooking, take it as a sign.

5. Don't worry, be happy. You don't like to think about money. So you don't. You never bother to check your receipts. You don't keep a running balance of what you've spent. You just go blissfully along, running up a new credit card balance. Even if you pay it off faithfully, you're luckier than you are smart.

6. A $5,000 credit limit means you have $5,000 to spend. Not to put too fine a point on it, but your credit limit is not actually money in your pocket. When you shop on credit and don't pay your balance off in full, you're spending money you have yet to earn. What will you do if you suffer a reversal of fortune, e.g., get sick, lose some hours at work, or get laid off? If your credit card balance runs close to your

5 steps to recovery

If you think you might have a serious shopping problem, try the following:

- Figure out your buying patterns. Take an inventory of what you own. If you have 30 pairs of shoes, only five of which you wear regularly, steer clear of shoe stores.
- Quell the urge. Take 24 hours and postpone buying what you think you want.
- Cut back. If you always buy two or three, buy only one.
- Simplify. Buy only the basic necessities such as food and transportation and keep track of every penny you spend.
- Quit cold turkey. Throw your credit cards behind the refrigerator and pay for everything with cash. Hey, that debit card is cheating!

credit limit every month, consider yourself a chronic spender.

As a society, we already have way more stuff than our parents. Do we really need more? At some point we've got to move back to the idea that acquisition of stuff should fulfil our needs, not make us work longer and longer hours to accumulate things we don't even have time to use.

Money 101. Two couples, one year to make them richer

Halfway to accomplishing their goals

Since January I have been working to improve the finances of two Canadian couples. By focusing on growing their net worth, we have tackled debt, bought a home, prepared for the arrival of a new baby and started preparing for the long term — eventual retirement. Follow along every month as we examine each couple's bank accounts, work through any challenges they face, and celebrate all of their financial accomplishments along the way. — Lesley-Anne Scorgie/For Metro

Anne-Marie and Peter are eagerly anticipating the birth of their baby. SHUTTERSTOCK

Anne-Marie and Peter

With two weeks left before their baby arrives, Anne-Marie and Peter have raced toward firming up their insurance coverage, finishing their nursery and putting the final touches on their maternity-leave budget.

With feelings of parental protection kicking in, Anne-Marie and Peter have amped up Anne-Marie's insurance policy provided through her employer and completed their wills. Both acts will provide extra security for their growing family.

Anne-Marie now has three times her basic salary in a death benefit, approximately $200,000. She also signed up for $500,000 in accidental death and dismemberment insurance and dependent life insurance, which gives $15,000 for Peter and $7,500 for their child, should either pass away. Her new insurance plan costs $35 per month.

Peter's employer offers minimal life and accident insurance, so he is seeking term life coverage — "use-it-or-lose-it" insurance — through an independent provider.

The couple will consider a whole-life policy, one where your beneficiaries are guaranteed a payout, in a few years. Currently, those poli-

- Life stage: Expecting their first child in June.
- Financial savvy: Medium — they use budgets to help guide spending, have some retirement savings, and are committed to paying off debt.
- Top goals for 2014: Pay off debt, start a savings program for child's education and down payment on first home.
- Current net worth: $86,000

cies are too expensive.

The couple is focused on improving their RRSPs, and is researching their mutual funds. Reviewing their current portfolio revealed that although Anne-Marie and Peter are balanced medium-risk investors, they are currently invested in a low-risk portfolio, with only one year of performance history. So they are exploring opportunities to transition into a balanced mutual fund portfolio containing a blend of bonds and blue-chip stocks with more than 10 years performance history. Though past performance isn't indicative of future performance, it provides insight into how the mutual fund has been managed in the past.

Peter is in the process of confirming his freelance opportunity valued at approximately $18,000. These funds would eliminate the couple's debts.

Homework:

Anne-Marie and Peter will focus on selecting new investments, welcoming their baby, applying for a social insurance number for the baby, and setting up their child's registered education savings plan.

Carolina and Jose

Caroline and Jose became homeowners in May.

After searching unsuccessfully, being outbid by other buyers and fighting the temptation to compromise on their wish list, the couple finally found a suburban townhome that meets the needs of their growing family — and still meets their budget constraints.

The townhome is well located near schools and transit, which will ease Jose's commute to work and reduce Carolina's time in the car driving their girls to and from various activities.

Though the townhome needs a little work, I have provided Jose and Carolina with a list of low-cost, high-impact home improvements that they can start to tackle themselves, like painting, changing knobs and making small repairs rather than replacing larger items like their furnace.

The final purchase price on the property was $250,000. Jose's parents gave them $25,000 for the down payment. On the recommendation of their mortgage broker, Jose and Carolina used part of the down payment to pay off their mini-van loan, and, using the remaining funds, secured a 25-year fixed-rate mortgage with a five-year term at approximately three per cent interest.

This decision reduced their overall interest expenses, and allowed them to qualify for a more suitable mortgage.

The couple's concerns over closing costs, which are typically one to two per cent of the home's value, have been tempered through Jose's recent job promotion and raise, insurance savings by eliminating the mini-van loan and receiving a healthy tax return.

Homework:

The focus for Carolina and Jose throughout June is to pack up and move into their new home as efficiently and affordably as possible — leaning on friends and family for support — while continuing to maintain their household budget, which is officially in the black. To build on the couple's financial momentum, primarily resulting from the gift of the down payment, they will also begin the process of creating a plan to officially move their net worth into a positive position by the end of the year.

A skewered shrimp kebob is a great appetizer or main course, especially when served over top a bed of tender spaghettini.

The combination of apricot preserves and hoisin sauce in this Apricot Glazed Shrimp Skewers and Spaghettini recipe goes well with the sweetness of the shrimp.

Shrimp are a low-fat and low-calorie protein source. A four-ounce serving has only 120 calories and two grams of fat and contains about one third your daily protein intake.

Shrimp are also an excellent source of selenium and vitamin B12.

You can also use a variety of fish such as scallops, or a firm white fish such as

Ingredients
• 16 medium shrimp (about 12 oz), peeled and deveined • 16 wooden skewers (about 6 inches long) • 1/4 cup apricot jam • 1 tbsp oyster sauce • 3 tbsp hoisin sauce • 3 tbsp chopped fresh basil • 4 oz whole wheat spaghettini • 2 tsp sesame oil swordfish, cod or halibut.

In terms of good quality pasta, Catelli has launched a preservative-free whole-wheat pasta with only wheat as the ingredient.

If you're using wooden skewers, soak in water for 20 minutes before grilling to prevent the wood from burning.

Directions

1. Thread the 16 medium, peeled and deveined shrimp onto the skewers.

2. Combine the apricot jam, oyster and hoisin sauce in a small bowl. Stir well and set aside half of the sauce. Brush the other half over the shrimp.

3. In the meantime, cook the pasta in boiling water just until tender, approximately 5 minutes. Drain well, add sesame oil and put on a serving plate.

4. In a grill pan or a skillet lightly coated with cooking spray, sauté the shrimp, just until they are no longer pink, about 5 minutes. Serve over top of the pasta, drizzle with the remaining sauce and garnish with basil.

Recommendation letters have always been a big part of the graduate school application process. Along with your transcripts, essays and standardized test scores, these letters provide admissions officers a window into your academic interests, job performance, and, ideally, your personality.

Students thinking about applying to graduate programs and fellowships in the fall should start thinking now about which professors they would like to ask to recommend them. Because writing detailed recommendations can be very time-consuming for faculty members, taking these simple steps can make the entire process go smoother for everyone.

Ask someone who knows you

"My biggest tip is 'Make sure the professor really knows you,'" said Julie Dodd, a professor in the College of Journalism and Communications at the University of Florida. Dodd often blogs about jobs and internships on her blog Thoughts on Teaching.

"Even if you've been in a small class with a professor, that doesn't mean that they know you," she points out.

Make it a point to participate in class, as it's a great way to both stand out and allow the professor to get to know you.

ISTOCK

It's also a good idea to talk to your professors about your life outside of class.

Don't be shy about inviting a professor to a concert you are performing in or mentioning the play that you are producing. While they may not be able to come, extending the invite is a great chance to talk about your interests and goals.

Dodd recently recommended a student who had taken a class with her while he was a sophomore, yet made it a point to regularly stop by her office for two years afterwards.

When he asked her for a job recommendation, "I was really invested in him," she said. "I wanted him to get a job."

Ask as early as possible

A good recommendation letter takes time to research and compose, so it's important to be respectful of the faculty member's schedule.

Ask at least a month before your deadline, says Dodd, though earlier is always better. Keep in mind that a lot of other students are also asking for letters and that the deadlines all tend to fall around the same dates.

"Sometimes it's a matter of time," said Dodd of why she sometimes has to turn students away. "They ask you right after another student asks, and you don't have time to do them all."

Ask in person

Schedule a meeting with your professor so you can discuss the schools you are

Please and thank you

Remember that you are asking for a favour

- Writing letters while juggling a teaching schedule and other responsibilities is a time-consuming process.
- Be sure to ask nicely and to send a thank you note when the applications are all in. Also, be sure to let your instructor know which school you selected in the end. Don't leave them wondering.

this is saying to a teacher why you want a letter from them. Saying something like, 'I think as a student, you really saw me as a writer,' lets the professor know why you requested them in particular.

Take no for an answer

You want your recommendations to be from people who are enthusiastic about you and your abilities. "Every letter you write is a reflection of you as a recommender," said Dodd, noting that she's also told students who were chronically absent or who missed deadlines exactly why she wasn't able to assist them.

If a professor tells you that they are not the best person to write your letter, believe them and move on.

Dodd adds that you should also tell your professor why you would like a recommendation from them specifically. "A key part of

HEALTH-CARE CAREERS

Monday, May 26, 2014

HCA's assist with daily activities

If you want to get in on a career growth area in Alberta, investigate becoming a health-care aide (HCA).

As the population ages, so too will the demand for workers who help with activities of daily living that allow seniors and others to stay in their own home longer. These aides help clients get in and out of bed, bathe, dress, feed, and take medications. They may also be called upon to change a bandage or prepare a simple meal.

An estimated 20 private and public colleges across the province offer a HCA course. The program at Bow Valley College in Calgary consists of 11 weeks of theory and lab work, followed by three weeks of instructor-led clinical experience in a long-term care facility, and two weeks where students are "buddied" in a non-long-term care facility like a hospice or group home.

"We want them to get two different types of placements," said Gail Thauberger, program co-ordinator.

An estimated 90 per cent of the HCA population is women, a good number of whom are new Canadians. Many view the program as "an entry" into the health-care field, some using it to launch into a nursing career, Thauberger said. At Bow Valley, health-care aides with work experience can take advantage of a "bridge" to becoming a practical nurse.

Prescription: Fill these positions

PAULINE ANDERSON
For Metro

Next to the oil industry, the health-care field is probably the biggest growth area in terms of future job prospects across Canada.

As the population ages and retires, the demand for skilled health-care professionals will steadily increase, experts predict. Health-care-related positions consistently lead the list of top jobs across the country compiled regularly by Canadian Business magazine using Statistics Canada data.

Here are some of the health professions projected to be in greatest demand in coming years:

Registered nurses: Of all the medical professions likely to be sought after in the future, nursing could be at the top of the list. A 2009 report by the Canadian Nurses Association predicted that if action isn't taken right away, the shortage of registered nurses, who perform all manner of hands-on bedside health care, will climb to almost 60,000 by 2022. The provinces and territories are moving from requiring diploma entry level to baccalaureate entry level for registered nurses (RNs).

Dental hygienist: These professionals clean and scale teeth, take X-rays, provide fluoride treatments and oral hygiene information to patients as well as assist dentists during procedures. Students typically must complete a three-year diploma course before being eligible to become a registered dental hygienist.

Radiation technologist: Demand for these technologists, especially those with more advanced diagnostics and medical imaging skills, will increase as use of technology in the field of medicine soars. They operate X-ray, radio-graphic, fluoroscopic and radiation detection equipment. A minimum of a college diploma is required with grads often specializing in areas such as mammography or computerized tomography.

Respiratory therapist: These medical professionals diagnose and treat airway-related health issues. Prospective therapists complete a three-year community college program and pass a certification exam to become a registered respiratory therapist (RRT).

Profession. No health without mental health

PAULINE
ANDERSON

With the stigma of mental illness subsiding, an increasing number of Albertans are deciding that psychiatric nursing is the right career for them.

"There's a greater emphasis now being put on the need to treat all areas of the person," said Barbara Lowe, executive director, College of Registered Psychiatric Nurses of Alberta. "There really can be no health without mental health."

The field of psychiatric nursing today is "dynamic, exciting, always changing, and with so much opportunity and diversity," Lowe said.

At MacEwan University in Edmonton and its satellite program in nearby Pinocha, the psychiatric nursing program is in high demand. For every one student accepted into the program, six others are turned away. About 70 nurses graduate from the 2.5 year diploma program every year, and, as of this fall, they can invest another 1.5 years to get a degree in psychiatric nursing.

Students learn "generalist nursing competencies" such as giving shots and taking blood pressure, but "the greater depth and breadth of their education is in mental health," Lowe said.

Instructors teach the holistic approach to health care, she said. "You can't separate the biological from the psychological, the physiological, the sociological and the cultural."

Students learn how to create a "therapeutic relationship" with clients "but never forgetting that the mind is attached to the body," Lowe said.

A person with severe depression, for example, could have physical as well as psychiatric symptoms

Males make up about 25 per cent of graduates, which is far more than other areas of nursing. This could be a carry-over from the era when the mentally ill were warehoused in asylums, few adequate treatments were available, and male orderlies were called upon to provide services.

Although those institutions could be "dangerous, scary places to work," today's work environment for psychiatric nurses is no more disruptive than any other area of nursing, Lowe said.

That environment could be a psychiatric unit, correctional facility, remand centre, geriatric or long-term care centre, school, or a private counselling practice. Psychiatric nurses are also needed in acute or surgical wings of hospitals.

Provincial laws

- According to the Canadian Federation of Mental Health Nurses, the designation of registered psychiatric nurses is used in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, as well as Alberta, with each province providing its own licensing board. The role of the psychiatric nurse may overlap with that of a social worker or psychologist with regard to such things as clinical counselling or discharge planning. Although psychiatric nurses can practise independently, they are subject to provincial laws governing their scope of practice.

Taylor, the college's deputy registrar, a psychiatric nurse for more than 35 years, said she entered the profession because she wanted to "deal with the whole, unique person with all the components versus just dealing with a fractured hip."

For Metro

Many Canadians are considering careers in health care, as more analysts predict that the sector will continue to generate a wealth of jobs over the next 25 years.

Feeding the trend is a constellation of factors, including an aging population, the growing number of effective therapies and diagnostic tools, and increased public awareness of what it takes to remain healthy. Given these realities, it should come as no surprise that Canadian Business magazine's list of the top 10 jobs by demand by 2020 includes three in the health-care sector.

Along with traditional jobs such as registered nurse and dental hygienist, demand is also expected to remain strong for new and emerging careers, such as dietician, care co-ordinator and health-policy specialist. As provinces scramble to meet rising costs, many are assigning work once done exclusively by doctors to nurses and medical technologists.

"With the increased volatility of the job market, it's challenging for universities and colleges to design programming," said David Rodas-Wright, the University of Ottawa's employer relations co-ordinator.

"I encourage people to learn as much as possible about what's out there. Attend job fairs, ask lots of questions, take advantage of co-op and volunteer opportunities. Find out what people actually do and what appeals to you. You have to build your own career," Rodas-Wright said.

Due to technological advancements, radiologists are better able to make an accurate diagnosis. SHUTTERSTOCK

A personal approach

Radiologists. Integral part of the health-care team that studies, diagnoses and treats biggest change he has seen during his 33-year career has been the technological advances in the imaging equipment used to detect things like tumours, cysts, broken bones, blocked arteries and pneumonia.

The enhancements to X-rays, mammograms, ultrasounds, CT, MRI and other imaging equipment has meant that radiologists are better able to make an accurate diagnosis at an earlier stage of the disease or condition.

Another change is that radiologists have more direct contact with patients.

"The radiologist is an integral part of the team overseeing patients," he said. "I think patients appreciate it when their radiologist speaks to them directly."

Lévesque finds radiology interesting because it covers all parts of the body. He also likes working with patients' family physicians and specialists.

But he especially enjoys what he calls "personalized medicine," when he and his patients get to know each other. "The more personal approach you take with patients the more you get back from them."

JANE DOUCET

Diagnostic radiology uses body-imaging techniques to study, diagnosis and treat diseases and other health conditions. According to the Canadian Medical Association, there are more than 2,300 diagnostic radiologists practising in Canada.

Dr. Jacques Lévesque, the president of the Canadian Association of Radiologists, graduated in diagnostic radiology from McGill University in 1981, then worked as an interventional radiologist in Quebec City and Ste-Foy, Que. From 1998 to 2004, he was chief of the radiology department at the Centre hospitalier universitaire de Québec.

Today, Lévesque is a clinical professor of radiology at the Université de Laval and the medical director of the Clinique radiologique de la Capitale in Quebec City. The

Dodgers' Beckett no-hits Phillies

Josh Beckett pitched the first no-hitter of his stellar career and the first in the majors this season, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers over the Philadelphia Phillies 6-0 on Sunday.

Beckett struck out six, walked three and didn't come close to allowing a hit against a lineup that included two former NL MVPs and four former all-stars.

The 34-year-old right-hander, whose career was almost derailed last year by a nerve condition that left him unable to feel his fingertips, threw 128 pitches and fanned Chase Utley on a called strike three to end the game.

Oil Kings of the junior jungle

The tireless Edmonton Oil Kings upset the Guelph Storm 6-3 to win the 2014 MasterCard Memorial Cup on Sunday.

Henrik Samuelsson led the Western Hockey League champions with two goals, including an empty-net goal, and three assists in the final.

Edgars Kulda had a goal and two assists and Edmonton also got goals from Cody Corbett, Tyler Robertson and Mitch Moroz.

The loss was the Storm's only one of the tournament.

Edmonton advanced to the final with a triple overtime semifinal win over the Val-d'Or Foreurs on Friday, which was the longest game in tournament history at 102 minutes 42 seconds. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Martin St. Louis scored in overtime to move the New York Rangers one win away from their first Stanley Cup final in 20 years with a 3-2 victory over the Montreal

Canadiens on Sunday.

The win marked the first time the home side had won in the Eastern Conference final.

Carl Hagelin had a short-handed goal and assisted on the overtime winner, and Derrick Brassard also scored for the Rangers in regulation.

Francis Bouillon and P.K. Subban scored for Montreal, while David Desharnais chipped in with two assists.

Hagelin opened the scoring 7:18 into the game on a backhand shot from Brian Boyle and Ryan McDonagh, and the Rangers took a 1-0 lead into the first intermission despite being outshot 11-9.

Bouillon put the Canadiens on the board eight minutes into the second period, but Brassard's goal with 56 seconds remaining in the frame gave New York a 2-1 advantage.

Subban tied the game two minutes into the third period, scoring Montreal's only power-play goal on seven chances in regulation. The Canadiens couldn't convert on a power-play opportunity in overtime. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thunder strike in Ibaka's dramatic comeback show

Game 3 victory. Westbrook, Durant shine in Oklahoma City's victory to cut San Antonio's lead to 2-1

Serge Ibaka scored 15 points in a dramatic return from what was thought to be a season-ending left-calf strain to help the Oklahoma City Thunder beat the San Antonio Spurs 106-97 on Sunday night in Game 3 of the Western Conference finals.

Russell Westbrook had 26 points, eight rebounds and seven assists, and Kevin Durant added 25 points and 10 rebounds to help the Thunder cut the Spurs' lead in the series to 2-1.

Ibaka started after missing the first two games of the series. The Thunder had said he likely would miss the rest of the playoffs, but the team changed course Friday.

Manu Ginobili scored 23 points and Tim Duncan added 16 points and eight rebounds for the Spurs.

Ibaka, who also had seven rebounds and four blocks, pointed to the sky as he left the game to cheers with 3:17 remaining and the Thunder ahead by 20 points.

The Thunder outrebounded the Spurs 52-36 after losing the battle of the boards in the first two games. San Antonio, which shot at least 50 per cent in the first two games, shot just 40 per cent on Sunday night.

San Antonio won the first two games by a combined 52 points, but things were different with Ibaka's return. Thunder coach Scott Brooks also inserted speedy Reggie Jackson into the starting lineup in Thabo Sefolosha's place. Jackson finished with 15 points.

Twice in the final minute of the first half, Ginobili hit 3-pointers, and both times, Westbrook answered with a 3-pointer. The last one, with 0.6 seconds left, gave the Thunder a 57-53 lead. Oklahoma City shot 56 per cent in the first half, but turned the ball over 12 times. Ginobili had 20 points and made 5 of 7 3-pointers before the break to keep the Spurs close.

Oklahoma City extended its lead to 83-76 at the end of the third quarter. A runner by Durant, then a 3-pointer by Caron Butler pushed the Thunder lead to 90-76 with just over 10 minutes to play.

A daredevil pass, a split-second lead, an Indy 500

Ryan Hunter-Reay peeked around Helio Castroneves, then reversed course and dipped inside for a daredevil pass and the lead in the Indianapolis 500.

Castroneves charged back to the front, winning a drag race down the frontstretch at Indianapolis Motor Speedway. And then, in a stirring wheel-to-wheel battle between a pair of bright yellow cars, Hunter-Reay seized the lead once more Sunday as the drivers hurtled across the Yard of Bricks with a single, 2.5-mile lap remaining.

With nobody in front of him, Hunter-Reay used the entire track to keep Castroneves in his rearview mirror. He nipped him at the line by less than half a car length, denying his Brazilian rival a chance at history Sunday and becoming the first American in eight years to win the Indy 500.

"The Greatest Spectacle in Racing" had lived up to its nickname.

"This race was ridiculously close and competitive," Hunter-Reay said. "Just glad I picked the right time to go."

The finish was well worth the wait — to the fans who watched 150 laps of caution-free racing, to the drivers who bided their time unsure of when they should charge to the front and to Hunter-Reay, who finally got to drink the celebratory milk in his seventh try. He beat Castroneves by just 0.060 seconds — only the 1992 race had a closer finish when Al Unser Jr. beat Scott Goodyear by 0.043 seconds.

"I'm a proud American boy, that's for sure," Hunter-Reay said in Victory Lane before he was joined by his wife and son. "I've watched this race since I was sitting in diapers on the floor in front of the TV. My son did it today. He watched me here. I'm thrilled. This is American history, this race. This is American tradition."

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

This should be one of the most enjoyable times of the year but if you want it to be really special, be more optimistic. A lot will depend on your state of mind. It creates your reality.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

The moment you start seeing yourself as a victim is the moment you lose. No matter what others may be saying and doing you are master of your fate. Think like a winner again.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

For some time now you have been doing too many things for too many people and hardly anything for yourself. That must change. Start putting your own needs first this week.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Impulse buying could be a problem over the next few days, so keep a tight hold on your cash and credit cards and make sure you can return anything you buy later.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

There is so much you want to do in life but you are beginning to wonder if time and opportunity have passed you by. No they have not. It's not really about time, it's about motivation. What can you do now, this very minute? Do it!

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

People in positions of power will make demands of you over the next few days that you may find hard to meet. Stay calm and keep your mind free of fear. Always think logically and always act quickly.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Things that have been hidden from you in recent weeks and months will be revealed over the next few days. Try not to dwell on the many little things that make up your life. Only the big picture matters now.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

What is the most important factor in success? It's knowing what you want. If you still don't know what you are aiming to do with your life, you must give it some thought this week.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

The most important thing over the next few days is that you don't give anyone the authority to make decisions on your behalf. Stay in control of your destiny because everything else depends on that.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

If you feel run down as the new week begins that's a sure sign you have been overdoing it. Put your wellbeing first and don't worry that you might fall behind. You're still well ahead.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You will take great strides over the next few days but where to? You have so many options open to you now but you need to choose one and stick with it.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You are carrying a load at the moment and need to find someone who can help take the strain. The good news is there are people you have done favours for who would like nothing better than to return the compliment. SALLY BROMPTON
